Linor Goralik is a writer, poet and artist living between Israel and Russia. She has authored a number of novels, short prose and poetry collections, non-fiction works, and children’s books. In addition to writing fiction, she translates prose and poetry from Hebrew and English and teaches costume theory at the State University for the Humanities and the Higher School of Economics, both in Moscow. Featuring selections of short prose, poetry, dramas, and comic strips, Found Life is Goralik’s first English-language collection.
