This talk explores how sexual and gender difference have been regulated at the U.S. borders since the late nineteenth century. It provides a historical overview of the critical ways sexuality and gender have collided with constructions of race and ethnicity to create "desirable" and "undesirable" categories of migrants and immigrants.

Julio Capó, Jr. is Associate Professor of History and the Commonwealth Honors College at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Capó researches inter-American histories, with a focus on queer, Latinx, race, immigration, and empire studies.