Third World Studies Presents

Radical Technologies: The Design of Everyday life

Adam Greenfield

Selected in 2013 as Senior Urban Fellow at the LSE Cities centre of the London School of Economics, Adam Greenfield has taught in the Urban Design program of the Bartlett, University College London, and in New York University’s Interactive Telecommunications Program. His books include Everyware: The Dawning Age of Ubiquitous Computing, Urban Computing and Its Discontents, and the bestselling Against the Smart City.

October 9, 2017

2pm-4pm

The Great Hall
(Snacks and drinks served)

Co-sponsored: Program for the Study of Religion